

Community Disability Services Practitioner and Worker

The VRRI is a non-profit, service and research agency supporting persons with disabilities to live, learn and work in their community. The VRRI has several full-time and part-time opportunities for dynamic and flexible individuals to join our team in Community Disability Services Worker (CDSW) and Community Disability Services Practitioner (CDSP) positions.

As an integral part of our strong Services team, you will provide high-quality services and supports to adults in a variety of settings including community living, employment and community access. In addition to providing excellent client services, each position requires strong organizational skills and the ability to establish collaborative and effective working relationships.

Positions available now involve day, evening, and weekend work - perfect for students and others, who require flexibility in their work schedules.

Qualifications:

- relevant post secondary education
- experience working with individuals with disabilities
- demonstrated oral and written skills to meet planning and reporting requirements

Working at The VRRI means being valued for the important work you do. We offer a supportive team environment, competitive wages and benefits, career development and extensive training.

These competitions will close when positions are filled. Applicants are invited to submit a cover letter and resume to the address below. Please indicate Competition #SER 151 on all applications.
